Description

How do we understand feminism and its relation to the making of our bodies? What is intimacy and how are intimate relations formed? How are sexualities constructed in Asian societies? What is the relationship between feminism, bodies, intimacy and sexualities? From bell hooks' approach on feminism is for everybody to Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie's statement on We Should All Be Feminists to Cinzia Arruzza, Tithi Bhattacharya and Nancy Fraser's manifesto on Feminism for the 99%, students will begin with learning how gender is socially constructed, cultural ideologies are produced and reproduced, and how feminism is practiced in everyday life. Feminism is more than seeking equality with men, rather it takes into account various notions of difference, intersecting identities, femininities and masculinities.

This course will draw upon theoretical strands in feminist studies, cultural studies, queer studies and trans studies as critical tools to understand the social construction of bodies, intimacies and sexualities. By studying case studies and ethnographic research, you will be exposed to the challenges and obstacles in conducting research on intimate subject matters. Through a close reading of cultural representations, you will learn to analyze the meanings behind media representations on gender identities, heterosexuality and non-normative sexualities. This course examines how the body as a physical entity and a performative act is recognized, negotiated and regulated in closely linked yet diverse Asian societies. You will not only be learning the key theoretical approaches and emerging debates in the field of gender and sexuality studies, but rather, you will contribute by making debates on course materials and coming up with new interpretations of feminisms, bodies, intimacy and sexualities during the course.

- Aims : •
- To introduce students to different feminist concepts and theories;
  - To identify and analyse issues related to gender;
  - To encourage students to engage in feminist debates involving media representations of gender and sexualities.
- Learning Outcomes : On completion of the course, students will be able to:
1. LO1 : apply feminist perspective and theories to analyze gender and sexuality issues and practices in everyday life;
  2. LO2 : analyze the cultural politics involved in the representation and discourses of gender and sexuality and the way meanings are constructed in different contexts;
  3. LO3: articulate feminist knowledge to different disciplines or fields of knowledge.
- Indicative Content :
1. Cultural constructions of gender, sexualities and the body;
  2. Introduction to liberal, radical, postmodern, cyberfeminism, intersectional feminism;
  3. Gender and representation politics, e.g. in writings, films, visual arts
  4. Cultural politics around the gender-sexuality matrix
  5. Gender, everyday life politics and online autonomy
- Teaching Method : Lecture, seminar discussion, and students' presentation

Measurement of Learning Outcomes : The measurement of the three learning outcomes will be based on:

1. The case studies presented by students in the seminars will be assessed by the quantity and quality of the research materials, their ability to apply the feminist perspectives and theories learnt in class to do the analysis, and their understanding of cultural politics involved in the representation and discourses; (LO1, LO2)
2. The final research paper will require students to have an in-depth analysis of the core debates in feminist cultural politics and its practices. Students' ability to articulate feminist knowledge to different disciplines or other fields of knowledge will be assessed. (LO3)

Assessment : 100% continuous assessment based on:

- Presentation in seminar (20%)
- Class participation (10%)
- Term project(70%)

Term project: Of approximate length of 8,000 characters in Chinese or 6,000 words in English. Class presentation (30 to 45 minutes) can be group or individual presentation.
