

Bachelor of Arts (Honours) in Cultural Studies

Programme Aims

In keeping with the liberal arts mission of the University to cultivate innovative, humanistic, value-oriented skills and knowledge, the Bachelor of Arts (Honours) programme in Cultural Studies (BACS) is designed to provide a challenging bilingual education to enable students:

- (1) To master the most avant garde cultural theories and engage actively in the contemporary analysis of culture in the age of digital transformation.
- (2) To learn the complex interplay between the modern self, society and emotion through intensive work in an inter-disciplinary curriculum; to learn how the multiple perspectives with which people approach the world today are crucial to our understanding of contemporary cultural and social realities; and
- (3) To open themselves intellectually to the diverse issues that have been transforming the wider conditions of life in the contemporary world, so as to develop a capacity for independent judgment on the cultural practices and social institutions they encounter today.

Our curriculum is designed to help students:

- (1) To acquire a solid grounding in the humanities, as well as to develop the intellectual and linguistic ability to express themselves clearly on a variety of cultural issues.
- (2) To benefit from an inter-disciplinary framework of study, through which diverse approaches to culture as value, commodity and representation can be integrated.
- (3) To make a comparative study of global patterns of cultural representation, imagination, and institutional formations in the modern world, and to analyse living examples of contemporary culture in various local and regional contexts.
- (4) To form a critical perspective on the social and historical forms of cultural practice in an Asian cosmopolitan city such as Hong Kong, and to develop an understanding of local cases in the light of international and inter-Asian Cultural Studies.
- (5) To cultivate a firm sense of self-orientation in their social life and career, as well as to reflect critically and creatively upon the current cultural situation and changing historical condition of Hong Kong in particular and China in general, through grasping the significance of seeing Hong Kong 'in the world'.

Learning Outcomes

The two overarching aims of our 4-year programme are:

- (1) To produce citizens with cross-disciplinary cultural knowledge and cultural research skills;
- (2) To equip our graduates with critical and practical knowledge that would be applicable to a diverse range of employment opportunities in the cultural sector, including conventional and new media, cultural industries, education, public services and community work.

BACS graduates are expected to acquire:

- (1) skills in critical writing and judgement, and media and textual analysis.
- (2) a capacity for creative thinking in applied cultural scenarios
- (3) skills in cross-cultural communication and self-reflexive analysis
- (4) tools for the conceptualization and execution of cultural engagement, planning and management.
