

Chicago-Style Citation Quick Guide

The humanities citation style is preferred in literature, history, and the arts. This style presents bibliographic information in notes and a bibliography. Below are some common examples of materials cited in the humanities style. Each example is given as a note [N], followed by a bibliographic entry [B]. For numerous specific examples, see chapters 16 and 17 of The Chicago Manual of Style, 15th edition.

Shortened citations

To reduce the bulk of documentation in scholarly works that use footnotes or endnotes, subsequent references to sources already given in full should be shortened whenever possible. The short form should include enough information to direct the reader to the appropriate entry in the bibliography. The shortened citation consists of the last name of the author and a shortened version of the title that contains the key words from the main title, omitting A or The. In short titles other than English, no word should be omitted that governs the case ending of a word included in the main title.

Full citation: Samuel A. Morley, Poverty and Inequality in Latin America: The Impact of Adjustment and Recovery (Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1995), 24-25.

Subsequent short form: Morley, Poverty and Inequality, 43.

Full citation: Regina M. Schwartz, "Nationals and Nationalism: Adultery in the House of David," Critical Inquiry 19, no. 1 (1992): 131-32.

Subsequent short form: Schwartz, "Nationals and Nationalism," 138.

Full citation: Ernest Kaiser, "The Literature of Harlem," in Harlem: A community in Transition, ed. J. H. Clarke (New York: Citadel Press, 1964).

Subsequent short form: Kaiser, "Literature of Harlem," 189.

Ibid.

The abbreviation "ibid." refers to a single work cited in the note immediately preceding. It must never be used if the preceding note contains more than one citation. It takes the place of the name(s) of the author(s) or editor(s), the title of the work, and as much of the succeeding material as is identical. If the entire reference, including page number(s) or other particulars, is identical, the word "ibid." alone is used (as in example 7 below).

5. Farmwinkle, Humor of the Midwest, 241.

6. Ibid., 258-59.

7. Ibid.

8. Ibid., 333-34.
